LASIK - 1st Edition

LASIK induces temporary dry eye in everyone. For the majority of healthy eyes, it is not a protracted issue. If patients have pre-existing dry eye, the post-op symptoms can be very bothersome and decrease vision. It is important to screen every LASIK candidate very closely for dry eye, and treat aggressively when encountered.

By: Stanley Teplick, M.D. If you no longer want to wear glasses or contact lenses to treat your nearsightedness, farsightedness, or astigmatism, LASIK surgery is a great alternative. Rather than simply compensating for the corneal aberrations that cause these lower-order refractive errors, LASIK actually corrects the corneal aberrations, thereby providing patients with clear vision.
